WSPN EXPANDS NETWORK TO RICHMOND, VA
Richmond Free Press Joins WSPN's Network of Suburban Community Newspapers

Reston, VA, October 01, 2009—Washington Baltimore Suburban Press Network set their sights southward as Richmond Free Press becomes the first Richmond community newspaper to join the network. This locally owned and operated weekly paper focuses on the Richmond, Virginia community and culture.

With a circulation of nearly 35,000, Richmond Free Press seeks to balance news reporting and commentary in the Richmond area. The paper strives to both educate readers as well as voice the opinions of residents in hopes to unite and improve the community. Richmond Free Press is a weekly paper and is accessible to residents throughout Central Virginia.

Washington Baltimore Suburban Press Network is happy to have this prize-winning paper in their network. Newspapers in the network's repertoire include over 100 community newspapers in the suburban areas of Washington, DC, Baltimore, Maryland, Northern Virginia, and now Richmond, with a million+ audited circulation.
